Australian steel producers to benefit from reduction in Chinese net exports

For Australian steel, the imminent reduction in Chinese steel net exports will continue to provide a positive macro tailwind. Louie Douvis

by Stirling Larkin

The recent events surrounding President Trump's decision to levy tariffs on steel and aluminum imports, seen by many as a first step towards triggering a global trade war, has, alongside others around the world, troubled Australian ultra-high-net-worth investors, who have everything to lose and nowhere to hide.

The departure last week of free-trader Gary Cohn from the Trump administration has only added to their fears.

No nation has more to lose from a rebellious American and reticent Chinese trade conflict than Australia.
